At home alone

Last Saturday, my parents decided to go to the cinema.

Usually, they ask a babysitter to stay with my sister Lucy and I, but last week was different.

In the morning, they asked me to come downstairs and sit down on the sofa.

'Tom, you are going to be 13 soon. We think we should trust you to stay at home on your own. Would you like to do that?' asked my Dad.

'Of course, Dad! You can trust me,' I answered. I was very excited about staying at home by myself. Maybe I could watch TV, or even invite my friend?

'Great,' said Mum. 'So your Dad and I are going out tonight. You will stay at home and look after your little sister.'

'Look after Lucy? But Mum!' I said, 'I was going to...'

'But what, Tom?', said Dad. 'Lucy needs to have a bath and be in bed by 8 o'clock. We want you both asleep when we get home at 10 pm.'

I stopped arguing. It was still quite exciting to stay at home without my parents. Maybe Lucy would go to bed really early and I could watch TV and eat popcorn all evening?

But of course that did not happen. Lucy did not like her supper. She then did not want a bath, or want to put on her pyjamas.
